I want to do a calculation. And within this calculation, it is then assigned to a variable called 'MyService'. 'MyService' then gets another calculation and that results is then assigned to a variable called 'MyVariable'. Edit 2 I have tried using `sys.argv[1]` and `sys.argv[2]` and those aren't working. Below is my script.

from math import *
import sys
Create a script called MathCalculator.py
Add this code to your python script
int x = 3
int y = 5
int result = 0
Edit the value in the sqrt calculation
int sqrtCalculation = math.sqrt(x*x*x)
Now run the command like this.
python MathCalculator.py
And the result should be the value of the value in the sqrt calculation
result = sqrtCalculation
A: Run this python script (ie. whatever.py)
from math import *
import sys
a=3
b=5
result=0
print 'a:' + str(a)
print 'b:' + str(b)
print 'result:' + str(result)
print 'sqrt(a*a*a):' + str(math.sqrt(a*a*a))
Now, simply run the script ie.
$ python whatever.py
Output: a: 3 b: 5 result: 10 sqrt(a*a*a): 10
This is a simple way to solve your problem.
Q: Is the wolframalpha function working correctly in Mathematica
I have the following code:
Sqrt[1 + w3^2] w3^2 + Sqrt[1 + w4^2] w4^2 + Sqrt[1 + w5^2] w5^2
Then I run it through WolframAlpha and it gives me the result:
0.971786 w3^2 + 0.971786 w4^2 + 0.971786 w5^2
I am new to Mathematica and just wondering if this is something obvious that I have not done.
Thanks
A: As the WolframAlpha result shows, w3 is $
