Q: fetch all first level and second level object names and display them in html dropdown list To fetch all first level and second level object names in apex I am using following code public with sharing class objectDetails{ public String selection{get;set;} public List oList1 {get;set;} public List oList2 {get;set;} List< objectlist> public objectDetails() { if(selection =='All') { objectlist = [SELECT Id, Name FROM Opportunity WHERE Type = 'CLOSED' OR Type = 'WON' LIMIT 10000]; } else { objectlist = [SELECT Id, Name FROM Opportunity WHERE Type = 'CLOSED' OR Type = 'WON' AND Name = 'Accenture Services' LIMIT 10]; } oList1 = new List(); for(SObject so : objectlist) { oList1.add(new SelectOption(so.get('Id'), so.get('Name'))); } oList2 = new List(); for(SObject so : objectlist) { oList2.add(new SelectOption(so.get('Name'), so.get('Name'))); } public List getObject() { if(oList1.size()=0) { return oList1; } else { return oList2; } } } when I run above I get below error Unexpected error has occurred. Please contact your administrator A: When you try to access a field in a child list, you first need to get the list of objects from the parent list. To do that, use getRecords. public with sharing class objectDetails{ public String selection {get;set;} public List oList1 {get;set;} public List oList2 {get;set;}

The long-lasting unfurlable shield design is driven by a high-strength multilayer steel technology. Today's driving conditions place an increasing demand on the underside of a motorcycle. From grit and dust to potholes and bumps, the underside is subjected to tougher demands than the other surfaces of the motorcycle. Since the inner surface of the shield is exposed to significant amounts of dirt, sand and other materials and often becomes a huge surface that is exposed to the pressure of the road, it is important for the shield to withstand this tough terrain. At least 18 people were killed and more than 50 injured in a stampede at a music festival in Virginia on Sunday, as crowds of young people overturned trucks and raced to escape them, according to the officials. The accident happened at the Electric Daisy Carnival, which was held at the three-day New Year's music festival in Pomona, California. The event is one of the world's largest music festivals, with more than 120,000 attending, according to the website Eventbrite. The carnival was producing a "glittering edition" of its EDM music genre, according to The Associated Press. A video taken by a spectator shows about 1,000 people running from the trucks to safety, as other people wrestle with them to avoid being crushed. We are focused on the injured and will assist local law enforcement officials. Our main priority is to assist with the injured. We are monitoring the situation and are asking for public patience as we work to attend to the injured. — EDC Facebook We are focused on the injured and will assist local law enforcement officials. Our main priority is to assist with the injured. We are monitoring the situation and are asking for public patience as we work to attend to the injured. — EDC PA (@EDC_PA) January 2, 2018 Video from NBC Los Angeles reporter Greg Morabito shows people pushing each other and trying to get past the trucks. Some are on top of them, while others appear to be trying to rescue people by lifting them up. Orange County Fire Department Battalion Chief Joel Buchanan said the accident happened just before 11 a.m. Sunday. Buchanan said he initially received just three calls about the accident, then more calls started coming in from around the area, with the majority of calls coming from the festival. "We have confirmed over
