Open your Autodesk Autocad product. Go to the "My Keys" option, which is found in your Autodesk Autocad product. Find the desired key code (in this case: WA), and copy it. If you don't want to show the key code, just click the "Hide the key" option. Go to the UPNP console and enter the following commands to generate a random key: GenerateRandomKey.exe WA * WA is the key code that you copied from Autodesk Autocad. * You must not use "AUTOKAD" or "AUTOCAD" in the key code. * It is recommended that you not use any of the default files that are in the folder that you create, because they are automatically linked to the key you have generated. * You cannot use any single character in the key. * If you use more than one letter in your key, it will not work. * When you run the generate random key tool, it will create a new file named with the date and time that you ran the command, so you must ensure that you don't run the command more than once every 24 hours. * Once you are done generating your key, you must delete the temporary key. * You must be able to generate any random key, but you cannot generate a key that matches your account password. * If you generate a duplicate key, you will not be able to use it. * The key will never be used more than twice. * You can delete the key when you are finished with it, but be careful when you do so. * When you delete the key, you are also deleting any information that it contained. * If you delete a key, you will be prompted to register again. * The key will not generate when you are offline. * A backup file will be automatically created for you. * You must be connected to the internet when you use the tool. * You must be able to copy a key from one folder to another. * If
